Creating Refuge ^{Naturally} in Philly

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has an exciting opportunity to submit a proposal for $1 million of federal funding, which would be added to our annual budget of John Heinz National Wildlife Refuge as part of the Service's Urban Refuge Initiative. We are developing a proposal that, together with partners, would:

- Educate and Engage Youth to nurture an appreciation of nature and develop an environmental ethic through playing, learning, serving and working outside.
- Engage Eastwick and other communities adjacent to the Refuge to promote environmental, economic, and socially sustainable communities.
- Create Corridors to Nature by improving infrastructure and programs to provide safe access and a welcoming atmosphere to the John Heinz National Wildlife Refuge and other natural areas.
- Bring nature into the city by working with communities and partners to build neighborhood “pocket parks,” developing exhibits and natural areas at sites throughout Philadelphia, telling our story through strategic communications, and contributing to regional environmental and sustainability initiatives.
