The Tribal Nonpoint Source Pollution Control Program helps federally-recognized Indian tribes develop and implement polluted runoff control programs and watershed-based plans that address critical water quality concerns and achieve positive environmental results.

Funding Availability

Approximately $8 million is anticipated to be allocated for Clean Water Act §319 tribal programs nationwide. This will allow awards of $30,000 (for tribes with land area less than 1,000 sq. miles) or $50,000 (for tribes with land area more than 1,000 sq. miles) in base funding to eligible tribes. The remaining funds will be awarded to eligible tribes through a national competition to support the implementation of priority “on-the-ground” watershed projects that will lead to water quality improvements (up to $100,000 per project).

Eligible Activities (but not limited to):

- Implementing the tribe’s approved Nonpoint Source (NPS) management program
- Implementing best management practices (BMPs) that will reduce or eliminate NPS pollution in receiving water bodies, resulting in water quality benefits
- Implementing “on-the-ground” watershed projects (i.e., stream restoration, revegetation, buffer strips, installing gabions, tree planting, removal of invasive/non-native species, and more)
- Developing and implementing a watershed based plan
- Conducting NPS education programs
- Hiring qualified staff
- Training and travel

The White Mountain Apache Tribe streambank was seeded with a native grass seed mixture, then covered in an all-natural double net erosion control fabric. The fabric acts as a mulch and provides short term bank protection. Plugs of wet-land plants (sedges) were planted to help establish vegetation.
