

DWSRF and Capacity Building in Action Webinar Series

The Drinking Water State Revolving Fund (DWSRF) and Sustainable Systems Teams at EPA are hosting a series of webinars to highlight ways in which DWSRF set-asides and infrastructure project assistance can be used to build capacity at drinking water systems. Each webinar will include background on EPA initiatives, state presentations on current projects, and discussion on future possibilities.

DWSRF and Workforce Development

Wednesday, January 27th, 2021, 3:00-4:00 pm Eastern

Published in October 2020, the America's Water Sector Workforce Initiative is a collaborative approach to address the challenges facing the water sector workforce - bringing together stakeholders from the federal government, industry groups, water and wastewater utilities, and state and local governments.

During this webinar, you will hear an overview of the goals and activities included in this document, and the current eligibilities of the DWSRF set-asides to address drinking water challenges through workforce development. Also joining the webinar are presenters from New Jersey and Tennessee to share how they use their set asides for workforce activities.

Register Here:

<https://register.gotowebinar.com/register/6023998121515829775>

If you have questions, comments or feedback, please contact Alison Flenniken (Flenniken.Alison@epa.gov).