“This indicates clearly that the regulatory process can be made to work and that working in good faith with the agencies is the correct approach to ensuring regulations that benefit both workers and the environment,” Gerard said.

The USW represents 850,000 members in the United States, Canada and the Caribbean, a majority of whom work in industries impacted by the EPA boiler rules.

Conference Letter_Inouye.pdf

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT
OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20503

October 19, 2011

THE DIRECTOR

The Honorable Daniel K. Inouye
Chairman
Committee on Appropriations
United States Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman:

The health of our economy depends on taking action now to create the conditions for the economy to grow, businesses to hire, and the middle class to feel secure. In the long run, our prosperity also depends on our ability to put the Nation on a sustainable fiscal course while making the investments we need to compete and win in the global economy. That is why the President has put forward a balanced plan to jumpstart economic growth and job creation now – and to lay the foundation for continued growth by achieving more than $4 trillion in deficit reduction over the next 10 years.

Two bipartisan agreements earlier this year created the framework for progress now. In April, the Congress passed final appropriations legislation for fiscal year (FY) 2011 that cut $40 billion from the FY 2010 scored funding level while also maintaining critical investments. Then in August, the Budget Control Act of 2011 (BCA) instituted spending caps that cut nearly $7 billion more from FY 2011 discretionary funding subject to the caps. By the end of the decade, the BCA will bring discretionary spending to its lowest level as a share of the economy since the Eisenhower Administration. Achieving these savings has required and will continue to require cutting or reforming programs that are no longer as necessary or as effective as they should be, as well as cutting programs that are important but impossible to afford in the current fiscal environment.

As we make these cuts, however, we also must make critical investments in areas such as education, innovation, and infrastructure. We must maintain our commitment to fund policy initiatives needed for our long-term economic health: health insurance reforms, to make health care more affordable to millions of families and bring down Federal deficits; financial reforms, to prevent a recurrence of the financial crisis; and education reforms, to give every child the tools to succeed in the modern global economy. These efforts are crucial to strengthening our families and communities and spurring economic growth and job creation.

Final appropriations bills for FY 2012 must cut funding under the caps by nearly $7 billion as reflected in the BCA, and at the same time, must protect and invest in areas critical for job creation and the future of the country's middle class. The Nation needs to do more to reduce the deficit, and the President has offered a detailed blueprint for more than $3 trillion in additional deficit reduction, but disregarding the BCA agreement and cutting already-tight discretionary program levels even further would be a serious mistake.

The swift passage of appropriations legislation should not be jeopardized by ideological provisions that have no place in funding legislation. The agreement on FY 2011 appropriations reflected this understanding, and this year's agreement should do so as well. In addition, temporary stop-gap appropriations bills prevent agencies from making needed decisions, generating harmful uncertainty and waste. Accordingly, the Administration urges the Congress to pass final appropriations, without ideological or political provisions, to fund the Government for the remainder of the fiscal year.

If the President is presented with a bill that undermines critical domestic priorities or national security through funding levels or language restrictions, contains earmarks, or fails to make the tough choices to cut where needed while maintaining what we need to spur long-term job creation and win the future, the President will veto the bill.

The Administration looks forward to working with the Congress to resolve both funding and language issues in a timely, mutually acceptable way. Funding critical priorities within the BCA's constraints requires difficult cuts and tough choices about allocation levels both among and within subcommittees. Highlights of the Administration's priorities within these constraints are outlined below.

Nonsecurity Priorities

Education, Training, and Health Programs. The Administration strongly commends the Senate Committee's Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations bill for funding key education and training priorities, including providing $699 million for the Race to the Top and vigorous support for other education reforms; sustaining the maximum Pell Grant award of $5,550 without reducing access to higher education for low-income students; investing in early education; supporting the Workforce Innovation Fund and worker training; and adequately funding AmeriCorps. In a period of limited resources, these initiatives encourage and reflect the systemic changes and evidence-based interventions that can achieve the greatest impacts at the lowest cost. In order to provide the level of resources needed to fund critical priorities, the Administration urges the Congress to maintain the programmatic funding level in the Senate Committee's bill, which already provides funding below the FY 2011 enacted level after excluding cap adjustments provided for under the BCA. Funding legislation must not require agencies funded in this bill to bear a disproportionate share of the program cuts required by the BCA.

Affordable Care Act (ACA). Final appropriations legislation for FY 2012 must adequately fund the multi-agency activities needed to implement the health care reforms included in the ACA. Rising health care costs drive budget deficits and impose crushing financial burdens on millions of families across the country. The ACA will hold health insurance companies accountable, lower health care costs, guarantee more choice, and ensure that quality, affordable coverage is available for all Americans. Through reforms to cut waste, reduce errors, and boost quality, the ACA will reduce the deficit by hundreds of billions of dollars.

Innovation, Clean Energy, and Advanced Manufacturing. The Administration urges the Congress to provide adequate funding for initiatives foundational to scientific and business innovation, including programs needed to make the transition to a clean energy economy and to foster other advanced manufacturing. These priorities include the Department of Energy's Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy Programs (for which the Administration requests no less than $1.95 billion), Advanced Research Projects Agency ($300 million), Office of Science ($4.95 billion), and Energy Information Administration ($105 million); the National Science Foundation; and the National Institute of Standards and Technology intramural research programs. The Administration also appreciates the significant increase provided in both the House and Senate Commerce, Justice, Science, and Related Agencies bills for the Joint Polar Satellite System. Robust funding for this project is essential so that the Nation does not risk significant degradation in weather forecasts and, in turn, negative impacts on public safety and critical industries.

Physical Infrastructure and Housing. Short-term job creation and long-term competitiveness depend on adequate investment in roads, rails, public transportation, and airports. The Administration continues to support a new surface transportation investment of $50 billion, a highway bill reauthorization and an Infrastructure Bank authorization. While those matters are pending, the Administration strongly prefers the approach in the Senate's Transportation, Housing and Urban Development, and Related Agencies Appropriations bill, which funds highway, highway safety, and mass transit obligation limitations at baseline levels and supports TIGER grants. At the same time, adequate investment in transportation cannot occur at the expense of critical support for public housing, homeless assistance, housing counseling, and other affordable housing programs when they are greatly needed. The Home Affordable Modification Program, which is a key tool to stabilizing the housing market, must be preserved.

Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act. In order to implement the Dodd-Frank Act, the Administration strongly supports the Senate bill's funding levels for the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, which will enable the regulators to develop, implement, and enforce new requirements for the securities and derivatives markets to protect investors and promote fair trading and a stronger, more stable economy. The Dodd-Frank Act contains essential measures to crack down on abuses in the mortgage industry, make financial contracts simpler, end hidden fees, and provide clear and concise information to borrowers about the obligations they are undertaking.

Protection of Food Safety and Health. It is critical that the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations bill provide robust funding for the Food and Drug Administration to continue implementation of the Food Safety Modernization Act, which includes improved prevention standards, inspections, and oversight of imports. The Administration also appreciates the Senate bill's strong funding for the Food Safety and Inspection Service at the Department of Agriculture. To provide a healthy start for America's children, the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children must also be fully funded.

Conservation and Environmental Protection. We also must protect the programs that Americans rely on for the preservation of our air, water, and land. The Administration urges the Congress to make available no less than $450 million for the Land and Water Conservation Fund, which provides for the preservation and management of areas important to hunters, anglers, and recreationists nationwide. The Congress should also fund the Environmental Protection Agency's operating budget at a level no lower than the FY 2011 enacted level, so it can carry out its core mission of protecting human health and the environment, providing us with clean air and water, enforcing the law (including increased inspections at oil facilities), and undertaking needed research, among other critical functions.

Core Government Functions. The Administration is proud of its record of cutting waste, fraud, and abuse. At the same time, the Government must have the resources to do its job. The significant reductions in funding for the Internal Revenue Service in both the House and Senate bills will undermine taxpayer service, reduce collections from scofflaws, and add billions of dollars to the deficit. The Administration urges the Congress to provide the IRS program integrity cap adjustment proposed in the President's deficit reduction plan, to invest in tax enforcement and compliance efforts that will save money in the long run and help ensure that all taxpayers live up to their responsibilities. Adequate funding should also be provided for the Federal Aviation Administration's operating requirements and modernization efforts to ensure that our air traffic control system can continue to safely and efficiently accommodate current and projected demand.

Terminations and Reductions. Given the tight budget constraints this year, adequate funding for top priorities requires lower funding elsewhere. The Administration commends both the House and Senate Committees for adopting many of the terminations and reductions proposed in the President's FY 2012 Budget. There remain areas, however, in which either the House or Senate bills have funded programs at higher levels than requested, and the Administration urges the Congress to redirect these funds to other priorities. For example:

- Both the House and Senate bills provide significantly more funding for non-disaster, non-emergency Corps of Engineers programs than requested. These funds could instead support investments in innovation and research that will contribute more significantly to long-run growth.
- The Budget proposed more than $70 million in savings from the Department of Agriculture which the House and Senate have not adopted and which could be used to ensure adequate support for loans and services in rural America and for food safety.
- Reduced funding for State Criminal Alien Assistance Program, consistent with the President's Budget, would free up scarce resources for higher-priority needs such as the Community Oriented Policing Services Hiring Grants Program.

Extraneous Provisions. The primary purpose of appropriations legislation is to fund the Government, and the Administration strongly opposes ideological and political provisions in these bills. The Administration strongly objects to the inclusion of measures that:

- Undermine implementation of the Affordable Care Act
- Undermine implementation of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act
- Undermine human health, safety, consumer or worker protections
- Undermine environmental protections and conservation
- Abandon settled approaches to divisive social issues
- Raise constitutional concerns, including concerns about interference with the President's constitutional powers and responsibilities

Security Priorities

The President has made it clear that he has no greater responsibility as Commander-in-Chief than protecting our national security, and that he will not accept a budget that compromises our ability to keep the United States safe and secure or to protect and advance our Nation's security interests around the world. The President believes that civilian and military power are inextricably linked, and that effective deployment of tools in a coordinated and flexible way is fundamental to meeting the whole of our national security priorities. The budget, therefore, must build military strength and smart civilian security programs, domestically and around the world.

Overall Defense and State and Foreign Operations Funding Levels. The most critical potential tradeoffs in security funding occur between the Department of Defense (DOD) and the agencies and programs funded in the State, Foreign Operations, and Related Programs Appropriations bill. The Administration strongly supports the Senate's allocation of funding, which was driven by 302(b) allocations that passed the Senate Appropriations Committee by a 29 to 1 vote. The DOD funding level, a freeze, will sustain our strong military, while the difficult but manageable reductions in the Department of State and other international programs leave the resources to sustain critical U.S. engagement around the world. By contrast, an unbalanced approach will not serve America's national security or its vital interests around the world.

Defense. The Administration appreciates congressional efforts to address DOD's highest warfighter needs, especially related to Overseas Contingency Operations, and to support the troops and their families. However, the Administration has concerns with some of the reductions proposed in both the Senate and House bills, and notes there are more than adequate offsets available in programs with lesser military value. The Administration also urges the Congress to support the Senate levels in the final appropriations legislation for Military Construction, and looks forward to working with the Congress to ensure that the highest priority projects are funded.

State and Foreign Operations. The Senate bill for State, Foreign Operations, and Related Programs protects key priorities while making difficult choices, such as adopting proposals in the President's FY 2012 Budget to reduce assistance to countries in Europe and Central Asia with lesser need. The Administration will strongly oppose legislation that decimates vital, bipartisan efforts like global health programs, food security, and global climate change initiatives – all programs aimed at the root causes of instability and insecurity in fragile and failing countries around the world. The Administration also opposes a failure to provide funding for general capital increases at multilateral development banks, which would hamper economic recovery worldwide. The Administration will work with the Congress to explore opportunities where increased transfer authority will provide flexibility to manage this constrained resource level.

National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA). The Administration urges the Congress to support robust funding for NNSA to continue the commitment to modernization of the nuclear weapons complex and to upgrading the stockpile set forth in the Nuclear Posture Review and reaffirmed as part of the New START Treaty ratification process. In addition, at a time when a grave danger is posed by the proliferation of nuclear materials which can fall into the hands of terrorist organizations, the Administration urges support for highly enriched uranium reactor conversions.

Overseas Contingency Operations (OCO). The Administration commends both the House and the Senate for funding OCO at both the Department of Defense and the Department of State. The Administration urges the Congress to adequately fund both base and OCO funding levels in both agencies, to support the critical missions in Iraq, Afghanistan, and Pakistan.

Veterans Affairs. The Administration appreciates both the House and the Senate's inclusion of sufficient funding to ensure we meet the needs of our Nation's veterans and fulfill our responsibilities to them. This funding also provides the investment needed to continue the modernization of the Department of Veterans Affairs to meet 21st Century challenges.

Homeland Security. The Administration urges the Congress to provide adequate resources for the Disaster Relief Fund (DRF) to fulfill its prior obligations and meet the grave needs generated by recent disasters. In light of the latest cost estimates, the Administration urges the Congress to provide a total of $7.1 billion for the DRF and recommends designating the portion of base funding associated with major disaster declarations as disaster relief under section 251 of the BCA. The Administration also urges the Congress to provide adequate funding for research and development and cybersecurity initiatives targeted at protecting the homeland.

Extraneous Provisions. A number of provisions in the security agencies undermine important policies or restrict needed flexibility in ways that undermine the interests of the United States. Some provisions also raise constitutional concerns, including concerns about interference with the President's constitutional powers and responsibilities.

Conclusion

The American people want their leaders in Washington to put politics aside and work together to make the tough decisions we need to strengthen our economy and prepare our Nation to compete and win in the world economy for years to come. The Administration is committed to that approach and looks forward to working with Members of Congress on both sides of the aisle to allocate taxpayer dollars in a way that is efficient and effective and that does not undermine our long-term economic growth.

Sincerely,

Jacob J. Lew

Re: Support for EPA Regulatory Agenda

Dear Administrator Jackson:

It was a pleasure chatting with you last Thursday at the New England Council meeting. National Grid absolutely shares your desire to boldly address the critical environmental problems facing our country. We echo your view that close collaboration between environmentally responsible businesses and EPA will help drive our nation to a cleaner and more sustainable future.

As we discussed, National Grid, both individually and through our long standing membership in the Clean Energy Group, continues to fully and publicly support EPA's timely implementation of the Cross State Air Pollution Rule (CSAPR) and the Utility Air Toxics Rule (MACT). We firmly believe that both these rules will enhance public health through significantly improved air quality particularly in the Northeast where we do business. Cleaner air in the Northeast will certainly lead to greater prospects for economic development in the region. We believe that the compliance time frames and options for extensions already available in the Clean Air Act are sufficient to assure achievement of the rules' objectives without compromising electric system reliability. Knowing these rules were imminent, we embarked three years ago on a four year plan to achieve significant NOx reductions as well as efficiency improvements to reduce fuel consumption and CO2 emissions. When complete in 2012, this $100 Million program will make six of our older units among the cleanest in their class.

With respect to CSAPR and MACT, we have been working closely with your staff on refining some of the details and were greatly encouraged by EPA's proposed corrections announced on October 6th which would amend the CSAPR NOx and SO2 allowance allocations for New York sources. The revised allocation will ensure appropriate numbers of allowances for our low emitting units. While we did join with the other New York generators in filing a petition for review with the DC Circuit Court, we did so reluctantly and only as a placeholder to protect our legal recourse in the event the proposal is challenged or otherwise not finalized as proposed. We do not expect to pursue any challenge of CSAPR if the revised allocation is finalized. On the contrary, we will continue to actively support it. Additionally, ongoing discussions with staff surrounding the MACT rule's details for oil fired units have also been encouraging and we look forward to timely promulgation of the final rule in November as planned.

National Grid has long advocated nationwide action to address greenhouse gas emissions. We have adopted our own aggressive "80% by 2050" reduction targets and are making good progress throughout the company. Accordingly, we look forward to fully supporting EPA's efforts to regulate greenhouse gases particularly as you propose NSPS for electric generating units in the near future.

Lastly, I appreciate your willingness and interest in engaging with us in discussions concerning the Gowanus Canal Superfund site in Brooklyn. National Grid fully recognizes our obligations among the responsible parties. Corrective actions at this site will have to address not only legacy manufactured gas plant (MGP) residues but ongoing NYC combined sewer overflows and other significant industrial contributions. The community clearly seeks a comprehensive solution that addresses all these sources of contamination. The way forward will certainly be technically, politically, legally and economically complex. With the interests of our New York City ratepayers, local taxpayers and affected community stakeholders fully in mind, our desire is to work together with EPA, New York State, New York City, other Potentially Responsible Parties and the community to achieve a remedy that is scientifically sound, cost effective, timely and equitable. I know that working together we will accomplish it. To advance the dialogue, we will follow your guidance and work to arrange a meeting in New York with yourself and Judith Enck in the next month or two.

Thank you again for your collaboration with National Grid and, most importantly, your unwavering commitment to the environment. Please count on the continued support of National Grid.

Very truly yours,

Thomas B. King
Executive Director and President

Dear Gwen and Lisa,

This is to thank both of you for what you do every day to make our planet more livable for our kids, and their kids, and all future generations!

And thank you, Lisa, for the wonderful article you and Secretary Sebelius wrote in USA Today yesterday, pointing out how the work your agencies do each day is not just to fine companies, or restrict their growth, or limit their profits...but it is to make sure we leave our planet a little cleaner and safer and more livable than it would have become if we were not taking the environment seriously! And, as you said, the least powerful communities often take the brunt of our waste and excessiveness, and it is there that watchdog agencies like EPA and HHS can protect the voiceless from continued exploitation.

Thanks!

Warmly,
Charles

RECORDED
2011 OCT 19 PM 1:54
OFFICE OF THE
EXECUTIVE SECRETARIAT

Dear Administrator Jackson,

I am the Mayor of the Village Of Ford Heights, a Village in the South portion of Cook County, Illinois. We are a small town with virtually no tax base of which approximately 96% of the residents are African American. The Village of Ford Heights has been noted as being one of the poorest communities in the State of Illinois. The median income is 57% below the median for the entire County. I have been an elected official of the Village for more than 10 years, and leading efforts in job training and placement programs for more than 18 years. Together with our Village Council, I am working hard to generate jobs and taxes in our community by attracting corporate investment and commercial development. We need good jobs and we need tax revenue to provide adequate public services.

I am writing to you today to express my concerns about the actions of your Agency with respect to the sole industrial facility in Ford Heights, a 20 MW tire-fired power plant owned by Geneva Energy LLC. Geneva Energy is the largest private employer and taxpayer in the Village. It is my belief that a tiny group of environmental activists have misused the concept of Environmental Justice ("EJ") and the USEPA to advance their agenda at the expense of the very people who it was intended to help -- low-income, minority communities like Ford Heights. As a result of current USEPA pressure, our community is at risk of losing its most significant employer as well as one of the cleanest solid fuel facilities in the Midwest. Given the terrible state of the economy and employment, especially among members of our community, this comes at an especially bad time. I am hoping with your help we can right an obvious wrong.

Geneva Energy purchased the power plant in our Village in 2005. Since that time, it has been an active supporter of our community. One of its top officers has served on the Board of directors for our local community service organization. Over the years, they have donated school supplies for our children, entertainment for our summer fair, and assisted in the clean-up of illegal dump sites. They remain a responsible corporate citizen.

In May of 2006 and again in 2010, your Agency received complaints alleging that the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency has violated Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act by issuing an air permit to Geneva Energy that allowed them to re-start an existing small power plant in our Village. The charge was made by the Chicago Legal Clinic ("CLC") representing a self-described "community organization", calling itself South Suburban Citizens Opposed to Polluting Our Environment ("SS-COPE"). As far as I can tell, this "group" consists of three active people none of which lives in our community. These people have a stated goal to close this facility and for 15 years have tried various legal tactics to do so – the EJ complaint is simply the most recent tactic. It is important that you know these people do not live in Ford Heights and are certainly not representative of, nor do they represent my constituents or my views. In contrast, I strongly support the facility's continued operation and to my knowledge, the facility has always enjoyed strong support from Village officials and local legislators. I also support a clean environment for all residents and hope that we can find a way to accomplish both, keeping the facility open and finding a way to set healthy and safe regulations that will allow them to continue to operate.

Furthermore, the charges are baseless. The permit was for a plant that was built in 1996 (at a cost of $100 million) in Ford Heights with local government support. It has modern pollution control systems. The IEPA went through a full public process, including public notice, a public hearing and the receipt of written comments. In addition, company officials discussed their plan with the elected Village officials multiple times, including at public meetings of our Board. This was not some backroom process without community support and involvement.

The IEPA's letter of May 17th, 2006 (attached) professionally addressed SS-COPE's specific complaints. SS-COPE never offered any evidence of its general claims, saying among other things at a public hearing that the plant led to increases in rodents, odor, traffic accidents, and dying gardens. Although this is pure fiction, that didn't stop the CLC from repeating these claims multiple times in its complaints to your Agency.

Permitting a power plant boiler is a serious matter because boilers can produce emissions of potentially harmful pollutants and that was especially true with Geneva's facility given the common misperceptions about burning tires. As the IEPA has noted, the Geneva facility was specially designed for tires, and has advanced pollution controls including a scrubber, bag-house and NOx reduction system. In fact the facility's emissions rates are so low that if all fossil-burning plants in Illinois operated as cleanly as Geneva's, sulfur dioxide ("SO2") emissions would be reduced by more than 80%. It is a minor source of Hazardous Air Pollutants ("HAPS"). According to the last USEPA National Emissions Inventory, the Geneva Energy plant ranked 516th among all sources of HAPs in Cook County, accounting for less than 0.01% of such emissions in the County.

While I appreciate that on the surface our community may look like a potential victim of EJ, it is not. And it is simply wrong that this facility has been the subject of an unresolved EJ complaint with your Agency for more than five years. This could have been dismissed after a brief investigation, lifting the cloud of uncertainty from the facility. The plant was permitted by IEPA professionals in a public process with meaningful involvement and support of the community. This process led to one of the tightest air permits in the country – one far exceeding Federal standards.

In closing, I am asking you to right this wrong by ruling quickly on the merits of this EJ case. The regulatory pressure resulting from this open issue recently led Geneva Energy to suspend operations and lay-off the majority of its staff. The Company is entitled to clarity as it contemplates its business options and future permitting actions. It would be an absurd result if "Environmental Justice" leads to the closing of one of the cleanest plants in the Midwest, harming a community that both wants and needs the tax base and jobs.

SS-COPE and CLC are correct about one thing -- this case is about violation of rights. It is about our community's right to self-determination, the State's right to regulate its facilities and the right to due process.

Sincerely,

Charles Griffin

Lisa,

I attended Julia Johnson's 11th Annual EIPF Conference held in Florida, October 9th thru 11th.

On Sunday, October 9th one of our keynote speakers was Gwendolyn Keyes, Regional Administrator for your Agency. I wanted to let you know Gwendolyn did a terrific job of representing US - EPA at this outstanding education forum for decision makers in the world of energy.

Hope you are doing well.

Kindest regards,

Ed

'Too dirty to fail?'

House Republicans' assault on our environmental laws must be stopped.

By Lisa P. Jackson

October 21, 2011

Americans must once again stand up for their right to clean air and clean water.

Since the beginning of this year, Republicans in the House have averaged roughly a vote every day the chamber has been in session to undermine the Environmental Protection Agency and our nation's environmental laws. They have picked up the pace recently – just last week they voted to stop the EPA's efforts to limit mercury and other hazardous pollutants from cement plants, boilers and incinerators – and it appears their campaign will continue for the foreseeable future.

Using the economy as cover, and repeating unfounded claims that "regulations kill jobs," they have pushed through an unprecedented rollback of the Clean Air Act, the Clean Water Act and our nation's waste-disposal laws, all of which have successfully protected our families for decades. We all remember "too big to fail"; this pseudo jobs plan to protect polluters might well be called "too dirty to fail."

The House has voted on provisions that, if they became law, would give big polluters a pass in complying with the standards that more than half of the power plants across the country already meet. The measures would indefinitely delay sensible upgrades to reduce air pollution from industrial boilers located in highly populated areas. And they would remove vital federal water protections, exposing treasured resources such as the Gulf of Mexico, Lake Erie, the Chesapeake Bay and the Los Angeles River to pollution.

How we respond to this assault on our environmental and public health protections will mean the difference between sickness and health – in some cases, life and death – for hundreds of thousands of citizens.

This is not hyperbole. The link between health issues and pollution is irrefutable. Mercury is a neurotoxin that affects brain development in unborn children and young people. Lead has similar effects in our bodies. Soot, composed of particles smaller across than a human hair, is formed when fuels are burned and is a direct cause of premature death. Nitrogen oxides and volatile organic compounds contribute to the ozone alert days when seniors, asthmatics and others with respiratory problems are at serious risk if they do nothing more dangerous than step outside and breathe the air.

"Too dirty to fail" tries to convince Americans that they must choose between their health and the economy, a choice that's been proved wrong for the four decades that the EPA has been in existence. No credible economist links our current economic crisis – or any economic crisis – to tough clean-air and clean-water standards.

A better approach is the president's call for federal agencies to ensure that regulations don't overburden American businesses. The EPA has already put that into effect by repealing or revising several unnecessary rules, while ensuring that essential health protections remain intact.

We can put Americans to work retrofitting outdated, dirty plants with updated pollution control technology. There are about 1,100 coal-fired units at about 500 power plants in this country. About half of these units are more than 40 years old, and about three-quarters of them are more than 30 years old. Of these 1,100 units, 44% do not use pollution controls such as scrubbers or catalysts to limit emissions, and they pour unlimited amounts of mercury, lead, arsenic and acid gases into our air. Despite requirements in the bipartisan 1990 Clean Air Act amendments, these facilities have largely refused to control their emissions – creating an uneven playing field for companies who play by the rules and gaming the system at the expense of our health.

If these plants continue to operate without pollution limits, as a legislative wish list from House Majority Leader Eric Cantor (R-Va.) would allow, there will be more cases of asthma, respiratory illness and premature deaths – with no clear path to new jobs.

By contrast, the nation's first-ever standards for mercury and other air toxic pollutants which the EPA will finalize this fall – and which the Republican leadership aims to block – are estimated to create 31,000 short-term construction jobs and 9,000 long-term jobs in the utility sector through modernizing power plants. And the savings in health benefits are estimated to be up to $140 billion per year by 2016.

Contrary to industry lobbying, this overhaul can be accomplished without affecting the reliability of our power grid.

Our country has a long tradition of treating environmental and public health protections as nonpartisan matters. It was the case when President Nixon created the EPA and signed into law the historic Clean Air Act, when President Ford signed into law the Safe Drinking Water Act and when President George H.W. Bush oversaw important improvements to the Clean Air Act and enacted the trading program that dramatically reduced acid rain pollution.

Our environment affects red states and blue states alike. It is time for House Republicans to stop politicizing our air and water. Let's end "too dirty to fail."

RE: New York v. EPA (D.C. Cir. 06-1322)/Negotiations to Revise Settlement Agreement

Dear Mr. Gunter:

On behalf of State Petitioners and Environmental Petitioners (collectively, "Petitioners") in the above-referenced case, this letter is to memorialize the parties' understanding of the terms allowing for additional time needed to negotiate a revised Settlement Agreement. This letter supplements my letter to you dated October 14, 2011.

In light of the progress made to date, Petitioners are amenable to extend the time for negotiations until November 30, 2011. Petitioners agree not to invoke their remedies under ¶ 7 of the Settlement Agreement through that date. Please let me know if anything in this letter does not accurately reflect our discussions.

Sincerely,

/s/ Michael J. Myers

For Arielle Klagsbrun, the Keystone XL pipeline is President Obama's last chance.

Klagsbrun went door to door to elect Obama in 2008. On her 18th birthday, she voted for him. "When President Obama was elected, I was probably one of the most excited people in the whole world," she told National Journal.

Three years later, Klagsbrun isn't so excited. "It's just not the same feeling as it was in 2008," she said.

At a fundraiser in St. Louis earlier this month, she wasn't listening to Obama anymore. She was interrupting him. Klagsbrun and a fellow student shouted at the president to stop the $7 billion Keystone XL pipeline, a controversial 1,700-mile project to bring carbon-heavy tar-sands oil from Alberta, Canada, to refineries on the Gulf Coast of Texas.

"The Keystone XL is the moment for Obama to say, 'Yes I am the person that you voted for,'" said Klagsbrun. "Should he veto the pipeline, a whole generation will be reinspired all around."

The youth vote was critical to Obama's election. An estimated 22 million Americans under the age of 30 voted in 2008 - the third-highest showing of young voters in U.S. history, according to the Center for Information and Research on Civic Learning and Engagement. Young voters preferred Obama by a 2-1 margin.

Environmental activists oppose the pipeline project because extraction and production of tar-sands oil is much more damaging to the environment and emits more greenhouse gases than the processes for obtaining and processing conventional oil. Proponents argue that it would slash U.S. dependence on foreign oil and create thousands of U.S. jobs.

All signs point to the administration's approval of the controversial project.

"We're looking at it right now," Obama told protesters who interrupted his speech on Wednesday at the University of Colorado in Denver. "No decision has been made. And I know your deep concern about it. So we will address it."

In a tough political environment and leading up to the 2012 election in which the primary issue is jobs, experts and insiders say there's no way the president will reject the project. A combined 91 percent of National Journal's Energy and Environment Insiders said earlier this month that Obama will give it the green light, with more than 70 percent predicting it would happen before the end of the year.

The State Department, which must decide whether to approve the project because it crosses international borders, held hearings across the country and in Washington this fall and hopes to make a decision by the end of the year.

"There's going to be a huge uproar if the administration approves the pipeline," said Stewart Boss, cochairman of the Sierra Student Coalition at the University of North Carolina. Though Boss, a junior at UNC, was too young to vote in 2008, he was certainly not short on the optimism and hope that drove his generation to the polls. Pending and past decisions such as the pipeline project, expanded drilling in the Arctic, and the Environmental Protection Agency's stalled ozone-pollution rule, Boss said, are cases in which Obama doesn't have the excuse of a divided government.

Boss and other environmentalists are putting their faith in the EPA instead of the White House. "More than any other person, [EPA Administrator] Lisa Jackson has been standing her ground on these climate and energy issues," said Boss.

Jackson said this week that the EPA is close to completing its review of the State Department's final environmental impact statement for the Keystone project. The EPA found an earlier draft "inadequate."

"This is a pipeline that cuts our country literally in half," Jackson told a meeting of young environmental activists at Howard University on Thursday.

Many of these young activists regard Jackson as a true champion of environmental issues.

"We stand behind Lisa Jackson and the EPA and we are pushing for President Obama to stand behind her," said Maura Friedman, a University of Georgia student who organized the university's Beyond Coal campaign.

"We were promised a lot of things by President Obama on environment that haven't been delivered," Friedman added. "These are things that we're going to remember when we go to the polls."

Dear Chiefs of Staff and WH Liaisons:

Please see below and attached an executive order on reducing prescription drug shortages and talking points on preventing drug shortages, protecting consumers, and preventing price gouging.

Thank you.

--Cabinet Affairs

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
October 31, 2011

Attached is an executive order signed by the President today regarding reducing prescription drug shortages.

Talking Points: We Can't Wait – Preventing Drug Shortages, Protecting Consumers and Preventing Price Gouging

- We're proud to lead the world in developing some of the most advanced prescription drugs to fight disease and save lives. But sometimes, we run low on a certain type of drug – driving up prices and putting patients at risk.

- Over the last five years, the number of these drug shortages has nearly tripled. Even though the FDA has successfully prevented the many of the shortages, it's clear we need to do more.
- We can't wait to act. That's why the President signed an executive order directing the FDA to take action to help further reduce and prevent drug shortages, protect consumers and prevent price gouging.
- In addition to the executive order, the President called on Congress to pass bipartisan legislation that will give the FDA new tools to prevent drug shortages.
- We can't wait for an increasingly dysfunctional Congress to do its job, so the President will continue to act where they won't.
- The President will continue to fight to restore a sense of security for middle-class Americans and rebuild an economy that works for everyone – not just folks at the top.
- Our problems are too serious. The stakes are too high. The issues facing Americans require serious bipartisan solutions, yet the Republicans in Congress have decided to put party before country and block legislation that would create jobs and grow the economy.
- While we will continue to work with Congress to bring up the American Jobs Act piece by piece, the President will continue to take executive actions that fight for the middle class because the American people simply can't wait.
- These steps aren't a substitute for the bold action we need to create jobs and grow the economy, but they'll make a difference.
- While President Obama continues to take executive actions, Republicans in Congress will have the opportunity to do what's right for the country. They'll have a chance to vote on a bill that will make an immediate investment of $50 billion in our nation's surface transportation infrastructure and a $10 billion investment to create a bipartisan National Infrastructure bank. Together, these initiatives will put hundreds of thousands of construction workers back on the job rebuilding our roads, rails, and runways.

Executive actions last week:

- On Monday in Las Vegas the President highlighted a set of steps to help responsible borrowers with little or no equity in their homes take advantage of today's low mortgage rates.
- On Tuesday, we challenged Community Health Centers to hire 8,000 veterans – approximately one veteran per health center site – over the next three years. Additionally, we took action to expand opportunities for veterans with medical training in the military to become physician assistants.
- On Wednesday, the President took action to make college more affordable and make it even easier to repay their federal student loans.

- On Friday, we directed agencies to take steps to speed up the transfer of federal research and development from the laboratory to the marketplace. We also directed the creation of BusinessUSA, a one-stop, central online platform where small businesses and businesses of all sizes that want to begin or increase exporting can access information about available federal programs without having to waste time navigating the federal bureaucracy.
- These actions build on our ongoing effort to take action and help middle class families. For example, we decided to stop waiting for Congress to fix No Child Left Behind, and decided to give states the flexibility they need to help our children meet higher standards.
- We acted to dramatically reduce the time it takes for small businesses to get paid when they have a contract with the federal government.
- We eliminated outdated regulations that will save hospitals and patients billions of dollars. We'll continue to do our job, it's time for Republicans in Congress to do theirs. It's time to put country before party and do what's right for the American people.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

October 31, 2011

EXECUTIVE ORDER

REDUCING PRESCRIPTION DRUG SHORTAGES

By the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution and the laws of the United States of America, it is hereby ordered as follows:

Section 1. Policy. Shortages of pharmaceutical drugs pose a serious and growing threat to public health. While a very small number of drugs in the United States experience a shortage in any given year, the number of prescription drug shortages in the United States nearly tripled between 2005 and 2010, and shortages are becoming more severe as well as more frequent. The affected medicines include cancer treatments, anesthesia drugs, and other drugs that are critical to the treatment and prevention of serious diseases and life-threatening conditions.

For example, over approximately the last 5 years, data indicates that the use of sterile injectable cancer treatments has increased by about 20 percent, without a corresponding increase in production capacity. While manufacturers are currently in the process of expanding capacity, it may be several years before production capacity has been significantly increased. Interruptions in the supplies of these drugs endanger patient safety and burden doctors, hospitals, pharmacists, and patients. They also increase health care costs, particularly because some participants in the market may use shortages as opportunities to hoard scarce drugs or charge exorbitant prices.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) in the Department of Health and Human Services has been working diligently to address this problem through its existing regulatory framework. While the root problems and many of their solutions are outside of the FDA's control, the agency has worked cooperatively with manufacturers to prevent or mitigate shortages by expediting review of certain regulatory submissions and adopting a flexible approach to drug manufacturing and importation regulations where appropriate. As a result, the FDA prevented 137 drug shortages in 2010 and 2011. Despite these successes, however, the problem of drug shortages has continued to grow.

Many different factors contribute to drug shortages, and solving this critical public health problem will require a multifaceted approach. An important factor in many of the recent shortages appears to be an increase in demand that exceeds current manufacturing capacity. While manufacturers are in the process of expanding capacity, one important step is ensuring that the FDA and the public receive adequate advance notice of shortages whenever possible. The FDA cannot begin to work with manufacturers or use the other tools at its disposal until it knows there is a potential problem. Similarly, early disclosure of a shortage can help hospitals, doctors, and patients make alternative arrangements before a shortage becomes a crisis. However, drug manufacturers have not consistently provided the FDA with adequate notice of potential shortages.

As part of my Administration's broader effort to work with manufacturers, health care providers, and other stakeholders to prevent drug shortages, this order directs the FDA to take steps that will help to prevent and reduce current and future disruptions in the supply of lifesaving medicines.

Sec. 2. Broader Reporting of Manufacturing Discontinuances. To the extent permitted by law, the FDA shall use all appropriate administrative tools, including its authority to interpret and administer the reporting requirements in 21 U.S.C. 356c, to require drug manufacturers to provide adequate advance notice of manufacturing discontinuances that could lead to shortages of drugs that are life-supporting or life-sustaining, or that prevent debilitating disease.

Sec. 3. Expedited Regulatory Review. To the extent practicable, and consistent with its statutory responsibility to ensure the safety and effectiveness of the drug supply, the FDA shall take steps to expand its current efforts to expedite its regulatory reviews, including reviews of new drug suppliers, manufacturing sites, and manufacturing changes, whenever it determines that expedited review would help to avoid or mitigate existing or potential drug shortages. In prioritizing and allocating its limited resources, the FDA should consider both the severity of the shortage and the importance of the affected drug to public health.

Sec. 4. Review of Certain Behaviors by Market Participants. The FDA shall communicate to the Department of Justice (DOJ) any findings that shortages have led market participants to stockpile the affected drugs or sell them at exorbitant prices. The DOJ shall then determine whether these activities are consistent with applicable law. Based on its determination, DOJ, in coordination with other State and Federal regulatory agencies as appropriate, should undertake whatever enforcement actions, if any, it deems appropriate.

Sec. 5. General Provisions. (a) Nothing in this order shall be construed to impair or otherwise affect:

(i) authority granted by law to an agency, or the head thereof; or

(ii) functions of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget relating to budgetary, administrative, or legislative proposals.

(b) This order shall be implemented consistent with applicable law and subject to the availability of appropriations.

(c) This order is not intended to, and does not, create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law or in equity by any party against the United States, its departments, agencies, or entities, its officers, employees, or agents, or any other person.

Carol Browner criticizes Keystone XL pipeline

By Darius Dixon
11/3/11 1:59 PM EDT

Opponents to the Keystone XL pipeline got a boost Thursday from the Obama administration's former energy and climate chief.

"It would be, my hope is that, this pipeline did not go forward," Carol Browner said, speaking at a Washington Post Live event in downtown Washington.

"There's been a lot of analysis about the jobs ... but, you know, I think there's enough debate there about really how many jobs, what are the duration of those jobs, that, again, I believe we have an obligation to start to address it," she said.

"First of all, there are very clear criteria in which the State Department has to make this decision and they will have to speak to those criteria because, obviously, whatever decision they make there will probably be litigation," Browner said.

On Tuesday, President Barack Obama said the State Department will deliver recommendations to the White House on the proposal. White House spokesmen have emphasized that the State Department is in charge of the review.

Browner also suggested the debate over the Keystone pipeline would be a non-issue if Congress and the administration enacted climate change legislation.

"I am, for one, obviously disappointed that we don't have a climate policy. I think it's unfortunate," Browner said. "I think it would've, I think, been the morally and ethically right thing to do to reduce greenhouse gases."

If we had a climate policy, Browner said, "we'd be having a different conversation right now about this pipeline."

Meanwhile, former National Security Adviser Gen. Jim Jones, speaking at the same event, said the Keystone XL project should go forward.

"I think it's a good project recognizing that, economically, it makes sense," Jones said. "It's certainly going to create a lot of jobs and as long as we can get around the other issues — is it the right thing to do? I think it is."
